六、RC1（每小题 14.2 分）

We all take a little extra effort to look nice for special occasions. But most of us have conflicting feelings about dressing up and feel guilty about taking the time to focus on clothes. Science now suggests the right dress may give ourselves the extra edge in our professional and personal lives. We hear sayings like "dress for the job you want; not the job you have". Most people don't really believe in them, but research into the impact of clothes on behavior now suggests that there may actually be a grain of truth in these sayings. Science says that the clothes we wear affect our behavior, our mood and even the way we interact with others because of the symbolic meaning that we assign to different types of clothing. We consider some clothes to be powerful, some to be fun, and so on. We even evaluate people whom we have just met based on their clothes. We also evaluate ourselves based on what we are wearing because of the way they make us feel. This means that the experience of wearing something affects our attitudes and our choice of behavior. There's a reason tailored jackets are associated with being 'dressed for success'. It seems that wearing formal office wear puts us in the right frame of mind to conduct business. Wearing power clothing makes us feel more confident and even increases hormones needed for displaying dominance. This in turn helps us become better negotiators and abstract thinkers. While a good suit works wonders for our performance in the boardroom, wearing formal wear isn't a great idea when we want to socialize. Studies have found that people tend to be less open and less able to relax when they wear formal clothes. On the other hand, a casual dress helps us become more friendly and creative. These findings support the idea of wearing business casuals on a Friday; since colleagues are most likely to take out time to socialize on the last work day of the week. I mean, who wants to hang out with people in their suits?

46. What does science suggest the right dress may do?

A. Add to our advantage in work and life.
B. Enable us to look a lot more attractive.
C. Help us to enjoy a fuller personal life.
D. Provide extra energy for what we do.

47. Why does science say the clothes one wears may affect their interaction with others?

A. Clothes usually represent one's social and economic status.
B. Clothes largely determine one's likability by people around.
C. Different types of clothing markedly reflect different personalities.
D. Different types of clothing convey different messages symbolically.

48. How do the clothes we wear sway our evaluation of ourselves?

A. By exerting an effect on our power of judgment.
B. By impacting how we feel about ourselves.
C. By affecting what we take as the basis for assessment.
D. By influencing our interpretation of symbolic messages.

49. Why does the author say tailored jackets are associated with being 'dressed for success'?

A. They are necessary for formal business dealings.

B. They may help people concentrate on their business.

C. They are vital to keeping a dominant position in business transactions.

D. They may enable people to have the right mentality for doing business.

50. What are people advised to do when they want to socialize?

A. Focus on clothing. B. Wear a good suit. C. Dress casually. D. Look unusual.

七、RC2（每小题 14.2 分）

With the rise of pop music, jazz, and electronic music, both opera and classical music started to fade away from the public eye. Some people are beginning to wonder whether opera and classical music are still relevant to the modern world of music. Granted, you will not typically see today's teenagers lending their ears to Bach anytime soon, but there are some major indicators that both opera and classical music are now still quite alive. The most major indicator of classical music's importance in society today is the fact that much of the popular music that is currently being produced uses similar beats, harmonies, and melodies as those that were used in some of classical music's best works. Even so, it can be difficult for those who do not study music theory to see this as an indicator, since it is subtle and just shows the impact symphonic orchestras have had on society's taste in music. A better example for the relevance of opera and classical music can be seen in the invention of the rock opera. Opera, in its simplest definition, is telling a story using music as its form. The art of telling a story using music has not faded in the least bit. In fact, sometimes actual orchestras are used for major parts of the opera itself. Some of the world's greatest hits have been parts of rock operas. Fans of classical music can also tell you that there are few types of music that are more expressive. So, it should come as no surprise to anyone that classical music pieces are still used as background music in modern movies. Symphonic orchestra compositions have also been created solely for the purpose of being included in major motion pictures. These are often very well received amongst mainstream music fans. Classical music and opera are the very foundation of what our modern music is based upon. Considering the huge impact they have had on our current society, it is without doubt that we can expect them to continue to remain important for centuries to come.

51. What does the author think of classical music and opera in today's world?

A. They still make their presence felt.

B. They have given way to electronic music.

C. They will not fade away from the public eye.

D. They are no longer relevant to teenagers' lives.

52. What do we learn about much of the popular music currently produced?

A. It can be difficult for many classical music fans to appreciate.

B. It can be seen as an indicator of refinement on classical music.

C. It caters to society's taste in music in a more subtle way than classical music.

D. It contains elements similar to those in some masterpieces of classical music.

53. Why does the author mention the invention of the rock opera?

A. To illustrate how to tell a story using music.

B. To present the simplest definition of opera.

C. To show the relevance of opera and classical music.

D. To justify the necessity of using orchestras in opera.

54. Why are classical music pieces still used as background music in modern movies?

A. There are few types of music for movie producers to choose from.

B. They are considered to be the most expressive type of music.

C. They are well received by movie fans from all over the world.

D. They are essential for movies to become the world's greatest hits.

55. What do we learn about our modern music?

A. It could not have come into being without classical music and opera as its foundation.

B. It cannot outcompete classical music and opera in its impact on our current society.

C. It will not enjoy as much popularity as classical music and opera among music fans.

D. It might not be able to rival classical music and opera in importance for centuries to come.

56. In my view, AI technology, when used appropriately, is a valuable ally in learning rather than a shortcut that replaces genuine effort. Since our university is surveying students on this issue, I would like to voice my support for embracing AI in a sensible, balanced way.
There are solid reasons for this position. First, AI tools raise learning efficiency: a chatbot can explain a confusing grammar point instantly, check my essay for mistakes, or gather background material that once took hours in the library. Second, AI offers personalized tutoring, adjusting its explanations to my own pace and weak spots. Admittedly, however, over-reliance is a real danger; if students let AI think for them, their own analytical skills will gradually wither.
Therefore, the key lies in "appropriate" use. We should treat AI as an assistant that guides and inspires, not a machine that hands us ready-made answers. Used within this boundary, AI can truly make learning smarter.

57. In recent years, Northeast China has been vigorously developing its ice and snow resources. For example, Harbin has built the Ice and Snow World with strong local characteristics by making full use of its rich ice and snow resources, allowing tourists to experience the unique local folk culture while enjoying the beauty of ice and snow. Today, the once-feared land of ice and snow is attracting tourists from all directions and has become a popular tourist destination. Ice and snow tourism is making an increasingly great contribution to the local economic development.
