（A） Do you know how people send messages to each other? Scientists say only 35% of our communication is done through spoken language. ___11___ It is natural for us to use our bodies to share our thoughts and feelings. ___12___ For example, smiling may be the easiest body language. People understand its meaning without thinking. ___13___ But the meaning of some body languages change from one culture to another. Most people move their heads up and down to mean “yes” and side to side to mean “no”. You may think that these have the same meanings everywhere. ___14___ In a country, people move their heads side to side to mean “yes”, and up and down to mean “no”. As we have looked at some examples, there are many kinds of body languages and their meanings may change from one culture to another. ___15___ If we don't understand them, we may make a mistake and send a wrong signal（信号）. The best advice is to watch what other people do in their cultures and follow them. A. Some of the ways of body language are the same all over the world. B. Body language is the most important. C. It is necessary for us to understand them. D So it is good to smile when we meet people. E. The other 65% is done through “body language”. F. It is not polite to smile at people. G. 16. A new subject will be carried out in school. The new change about the labor class in school has had a heated discussion online. In my opinion, this is a very good idea.

First, learning labor skills can help us become more independent. We can learn to cook simple meals, clean our rooms, or even fix small things at home. These are useful skills for our future life. Second, doing labor work can make us understand our parents better. When we try to do housework, we realize how hard our parents work every day. This will make us more grateful. Third, labor class can also teach us teamwork. For example, when we work together to plant trees or clean the classroom, we learn to help each other.

Of course, some students worry that labor class will take too much time. But I think if we plan our time well, we can balance study and labor. In fact, doing some physical work can also help us relax after studying for a long time.

In short, I believe the new labor class will bring us many benefits. It will not only teach us practical skills but also help us grow into better people. I am looking forward to the new subject!
